ABOUT UNSW MSA

The University of New South Wales Muslim Students' Association (UNSW MSA), founded in 2013, is a student-led organisation representing a diverse network of Muslim students and early-career professionals across disciplines including medicine, law, business, engineering, IT, and the sciences.

UNSW MSA supports students at a critical stage where academic success, career development, financial independence, and personal values intersect. Through flagship events, professional development programs, and leadership initiatives, we develop confident, high-performing individuals equipped to contribute meaningfully to their professions and communities.

In addition to community-building initiatives, UNSW MSA provides essential amenities such as access to prayer spaces, halal food options, and student merchandise to support the day-to-day needs of Muslim students on campus.

The Association is also focused on empowering students through opportunities to develop skills in da'wah, leadership, and event delivery, enabling members to confidently represent their faith and contribute positively within university and professional settings.

Furthermore, UNSW MSA actively facilitates connections between students and external organisations, with the aim of building long-term, values-aligned partnerships that create sustainable impact for students, the broader community, and the ummah.
